

COMMUNITY PAGES

BROUGHT TO YOU BY:

WISCONSIN STATE JOURNAL

Login Register Subscribe

HOME NEWS BUSINESS OPINION COMMUNITIES MARKETPLACE HOMES JOBS CARSOUP RENTALS

Dogs sharpen sniffing skills at UW-Whitewater

STORY DISCUSSION IMAGE (3) Font Size: - +

SAMARA KALK DERBY | 608-252-6439 | skalk@madison.com | Posted: Monday, June 28, 2010 4:45 am | No Comments Posted

Recommend 5 people recommend this.

5 retweet

Parker, an English springer spaniel, works on tracking skills with owner Debbie Mahen, of Walworth, on Sunday at Camp Pawmark in Whitewater. Buy this photo Steve Apps/Wisconsin State Journal

WHITEWATER — Ed Presnall has used dogs to help locate five adults who had walked away from nursing homes, one who walked away from a hospital and three missing children. This week, Presnall, of Walworth, is on the UW-Whitewater campus teaching dogs and their handlers how to find Alzheimer's victims and other people who may wander away from home. Presnall's an expert on training dogs in a technique called variable surface tracking.

Eight dogs and their handlers came from all over the country to attend Camp Pawmark. The three instructors have used their skills to find missing people, but most of the students are just here for sport.

"It's fun. The variables are endless. There are so many things that you have to train for," said Maureen Foley, a retired chemistry professor from Ann Arbor, Mich., attending Camp Pawmark with Rock, her fluffy, 3-year-old Belgian Tervuren. "It's a great relationship that you build with your dog."

Instructor Gretchen Stephenson, from Manassas, Va., laid the course early, dropping socks and other items to simulate a lost person. Most people who are lost wind up dropping personal effects: a handkerchief, a scarf, a sock, Presnall said. Those items simulate the last known point where the missing person was seen and become the starting point for the dog trackers, who walk normally on grass, across sidewalks, through mulch or over rocks. People make turns around buildings or go up stairs, all fair game for the dogs and their handlers.

"We age these tracks anywhere from three to five hours old, take the dog to the start, let him sniff the article ... and he picks up the lost person's scent as well as the individual DNA of that person. And then he follows her footsteps across campus," said Presnall, who has been doing variable surface tracking for 15 years and written several books on the subject.

Instructor Mary Thompson, from York, Maine, and her black Lab, Storm, now deceased, worked for 10 years with a local police department as a civilian. They found three lost children and eight suspects, before Maine ruled that only state-trained dogs could go after suspects, she said.

Variable surface tracking takes a lot of mental stamina, she said. The dogs have to eliminate all the other scents from their brain to focus on the one they need to follow, Thompson said.

The dogs are not robots, she said. "They can have bad days, too, like we can."

Posted in Local on Monday, June 28, 2010 4:45 am Updated: 9:38 am.

Print Email Share This

Add or View Comment

Login to post your comment. If you don't have an account, you may register for one.

MOST COMMENTED MOST READ FACEBOOK

- Cops cracking down on Beltline speeders (51) Comments
- Pensions in peril: Public worker retirement system sputters with market (42) Comments
- Obama fires embattled general McChrystal (35) Comments
- Doyle aide Morgan offered $245,000-a-year UW job -- no resume needed (21) Comments
- State appeals court: Gay parents do not have equal rights (20) Comments
- Rewrite of Wisconsin school aid formula proposed (19) Comments
- Metro drivers look to ditch Teamsters, join police union (18) Comments
- Parked train cars irk east side neighbors (17) Comments

More Latest Comments

LATEST VIDEO

Riding with "Booker"

Check out "Booker," the Dane County Library Service bookmobile, and its crew of intrepid librarians and the art lady. Click here to read the story.

ADVERTISER SERVICES

- Contact us for advertising information
- Download a media kit (PDF)
- Submit a celebration
- Legal Notices
- How to submit digital files for ads
- Place a classified ad for print or online

CURRENT OFFERS

MORE SERVICES

- Contact Wisconsin State Journal staff
- Newspaper archives
- Newspapers in Education

WISCONSIN STATE JOURNAL Local news Business Opinion Multimedia Data center State National Photos

CAP TIMES Opinion Politics Business Law & Order Campus Community Madison 360 Photos

SPORTS High schools Badgers Packers Brewers Other pro Local Sports Recreation

77 SQUARE Calendar Movies Music Food Arts City Life TV & Games Travel

MARKETPLACE Place an ad Homes for Sale Rentals Search Jobs CarSoup Sell It Madison Coupons Announcements Legals

COMMUNITIES Obituaries Celebrations Neighborhood Groups Forums Weddings

WEATHER Current conditions Forecast Radar Venue Forecasts

SERVICES Advertise Contact Us About Us Subscriber services Events Calendar Work for us

SEARCH  Go

